

Animal Pain and Consciousness

Interdisciplinary Workshop

Friday, January 11, 2013

York University, Department of Philosophy, Room: S 421 Ross

9:00 a. m.	Welcome
9:10 a. m.	Kristin Andrews: It's a pain to explain?
10.10 a.m.	Anne Russon: Signs of experiencing pain in orangutans (and other great apes)
11:10 a. m.	Coffee break
11:30 a.m.	Colin Allen: An obituary for the philosophy of animal pain
12:30 p. m.	Lunch Break
2:00 p. m.	Adam Shriver: What can research on nonhuman animals tell us about the unpleasantness of pain?
3:00 p. m.	Suzanne MacDonald: Observing the unobservable: how do we measure thoughts in nonhuman animals?
4.00 p. m.	Coffee break
4.30 p.m.	Verena Gottschling: Theorizing about animals in pain
	Poster Session and Reception
	Presenters
5:30 p. m. to 7.30 p. m.	Niusha Amiri: The paradox of unfelt pain Luke Kurowski: The evolutionary ancestry of phenomenal consciousness Josh Mugg: Dispositional higher-order thought and critter consciousness Olivia Sultanesco: Do apes understand goals?